

Constantinos M. Kalergis is a Consulting Engineer, President and Managing Director of the company ROIKOS ENGINEERING CONSULTANTS SA. He started his career in the Water Resources & Environment Department of the Civil Engineering Faculty at the National Technical University of Athens, Greece, taking an active part in the educational procedures and participating in many international research projects and specialized studies. In 1995 he co-founded the consultancy firm ROIKOS SA which he manages till to-date.

He has significant experience in project coordination, implementation and management of technical infrastructure studies and complex engineering projects. He has been commissioned and successfully managed numerous services contracts in various engineering fields (hydraulics, environmental, building, transportation, urban planning, cadastral, etc). He is also rigorously involved, since many years, in legal issues related to public procurement, administrative law and public administration processes, as well as legislation for incorporated companies. He possesses special knowhow and techniques in strategic operational management, organization and business administration and human resources management. He is married with Alexandra Papadima Kalergis, Chemical & Environmental Engineer, and they have 2 children, Helena and Michalis.